

Are you under 35
and in the metal
recycling industry?

The Young British Metals Recyclers (YBMR) initiative is suited to any job role, be it in the yard, the office, or the lab.

YBMR gives members a helpful resource by providing learning and development along with bespoke training that can enhance their own reputation within the company that they work, develop their customer relationships and improve their career progression. It also provides a valuable opportunity to meet and speak with fellow YBMR members.

The YBMR:

- Encourages participation in BMRA and YBMR activities by industry colleagues under the age of 35.
- Identifies purposeful and educational activities that may assist members of the YBMR in their own careers.
- Promotes networking opportunities between members of the YBMR and the wider metals industry, within the clear bounds of competition compliance.

YBMR members have enjoyed a number of visits to different organisations within the metallurgy sector giving insight into the wider industry. Social opportunities, such as a day at the races, also benefits members who can network, share knowledge and build relationships with each other.
